

CLERY ACT INFORMATION

The Clery Act is the result of a young College Student by the name of Jeanne Clery found murdered inside her University dorm room. This tragedy was a result of lack of reporting and under reporting crimes that happened at the University that Clery attended by campus police and security personnel. As a result Jeanne Clery's parents, Connie and Howard Clery, committed themselves to create enduring change on University sites mandating the published reports of crimes. In 1990, Congress approved the Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act, which was later renamed in Jeanne's memory, the Jeanne Clery Act, which took effect in 1991.

Lincoln Memorial University Law Enforcement Officers have full powers of arrest under the State of Tennessee's general statutes they are sworn to uphold. The Law Enforcement Jurisdiction is exclusive to property owned and controlled by Lincoln Memorial University. All LMU sworn law enforcement officers are continuously trained throughout the year with mandated in-service training required by the Tennessee Peace Officers Standards and Training Commission. They are additionally trained above the state mandated level of training as needs arise as incidents continue to happen around the world.

Lincoln Memorial University's Armed and Unarmed Security Officers have the authority to enforce school rules and have full arrest powers. The security officers are required to attend annual mandated training which meets the Tennessee and Virginia certification requirements. Each security officer receives additional training above the state mandated level that is exclusive to the issues that concern Lincoln Memorial University.

In addition to notification of crimes to campus law enforcement and/or security, below is a list of Campus Security Authorities that you can also reach out to and contact in order to report Clery reportable crimes.
