

JASON HAUSER, Ph.D.

SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT

Jason Hauser joined the LMU staff in 2021. As a special assistant to the president, Dr. Hauser supports the President and his staff by helping to ensure the quality of university communications, offering consult to the university's administration, and supporting the work of university committees. In addition, Dr. Hauser serves as an instructor in Lincoln Memorial's School of the Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences.

Dr. Hauser came to LMU from Auburn University, where he taught courses in the history of technology as well as courses in environmental and climate history. Dr. Hauser earned a BA and an MA in history from Appalachian State University and a PhD in American History from Mississippi State University. In addition to teaching, Dr. Hauser has worked as an editor and program evaluator for the Mississippi State University Research and Curriculum Unit, an organization dedicated to supporting public educators and education initiatives in Mississippi.

Dr. Hauser moved to the mountains from Birmingham, Alabama when he was eighteen years old to attend school, and he's wanted to make a life in Appalachia ever since. Dr. Hauser, his partner, and their two dogs enjoy the region's outdoor recreation opportunities—hiking, camping, watersports, and anything else the mountains provide.
