

Clyde Ray teaches political science courses at LMU, where he also serves as program coordinator of political science at pre-law advisor. He earned a B.S. in political science from Western Carolina University, an M.A. in political science from Villanova University, and a Ph.D. in political science from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

He is the author of two books, John Marshall's Constitutionalism (SUNY Press) and Defining Statesmanship: A Comparative Political Theory Analysis (Lexington Press), as well as several articles in the areas of constitutional law, American politics, and political theory.

At LMU, he enjoys working with undergraduates on questions related to historical and contemporary political issues and talking politics in general.