

Dr. MaryAnn Thrush began her academic career as a research assistant in an immunology laboratory at Purdue University. While working full time and raising two sons, she pursued her BA degree in Foreign Languages with a French major. Once graduated she moved to Norman Oklahoma for her Master's in Clinical Social work. After graduating she moved to Sarasota, Florida where she was in private psychotherapy practice as for 20 years. Her work led her to Guadalajara, Mexico where she practiced Lucid Image Therapy at a health spa for a year. Upon returning to the U.S., she worked for the University of California, San Diego, supervising a program that helped incarcerated people transition from prison to parole. Working with incarcerated people allowed her to realize the need for a greater understanding of this group of people. In order to contribute to this understanding, she returned to school (University of Florida) for a PhD in Criminology & Criminal Justice. She has been teaching at LMU since August, 2014.
